Will the casual gamer be able to manage a sumo tournament and a city? The answer to that question seems quite obvious. The casual gamer can't, and for them the stripped-down genre of city building is perfect. After all, why would you be able to play a Sumo match if you had no other goals than to win. That means that city building has always been a great match for those who would never want to play all day to win – never want to be challenged. Developers are now targeting the next subset of gamers, the people who will never take a challenge on and never want to
