Fracture healing in the aging female rat. One of the most common problems in orthopedic surgery is delayed union and nonunion. A major factor in delayed union of fracture is the patient's age. The age of the patient has been found to affect the rate and quality of healing, and has been shown to cause increase bone growth into early callus. In this study, quantitative histomorphometric analysis of healing fractures was performed in 20 female Sprague-Dawley rats (ages 3, 6 and 18 months). The animals underwent a closed femoral fracture, and were sacrificed at 2 weeks postoperatively. Compared with animals in the 3- and 6-month-old groups, the 18-month-old rats showed fewer total osteoblasts in the callus (pGerard Kenton Gerard Kenton (1875 - 11 July 1919) was an English cricketer.
