Microsoft Bing Maps 3D (Virtual Earth 3D)Q: Setting ASP.NET environment from inside a managed component I have a Silverlight application that uses a managed component. The component can be run on a server and is a wrapper for some server side resources. It is not a complete integration of the server resources into the Silverlight application. We use version 5 of the Silverlight application. The version of the component may be 4, 5, or 6. One of the pieces of data that this component is storing is the version of the server side component. This version is used for upgrade purposes. For some other reasons, we have to set this version of the server side component explicitly. This causes a "unhandled exception" on the server. Since the value is set programatically, I am looking for a way to set this value programatically on the server. It may not be an elegant solution, but it will get the job done. Any ideas? A: Try it. It doesn't need to be elegant. You're seeing this message because you're using an older version of Internet Explorer that is unsupported on our website.
