CIAO Point Of Sale

Ciao Point of Sale is a graphical point of sale (POS) application that is available for download and purchase on the Ciao Systems web site. Ciao Point of Sale has a Windows-style interface that is intended to look familiar to Windows customers and give them a familiar experience. Ciao Point of Sale is powered by the most recent versions of MS SQL Server and Ruby on Rails and is available in seven languages: English, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Chinese, and German. We also find that the brief response of the State's Assistant District Attorney on this issue was reasonable and not a constitutionally impermissible argument. VII 27 Thompson's final argument is that the prosecution violated the Jencks Act (18 U.S.C. Sec. 3500) by withholding the transcript of prior statements given by the defendant's accomplices. In his pretrial statement the defendant had admitted participating in the robbery, but denied that he had a gun or pistol. When called as a witness at the trial, Thompson stated that he had never used a pistol in any of the crimes. 28 The last time that Thompson made an oral statement to the police was on December 23, 1983, two days after the robbery. Thereafter a police officer took a written statement from him on December 25. At trial, however, the officer could not recall the contents of this statement, and he did not remember Thompson's having stated that Thompson had never used a gun, nor did he remember Thompson's denying that he had a gun. After seeing the statement, the Government took it to the District Attorney's office, who reviewed it, then returned it to the FBI. Thompson then moved for production of his prior statement, and the court referred the matter to a magistrate. The magistrate found that the statement was not a "statement by the defendant," nor was it "a prior statement by the defendant," as required by the Jencks Act. 18 U.S.C. Sec. 3500. Accordingly, the court denied Thompson's motion. The Government then asked the court to reconsider its ruling, and after reviewing the report of the magistrate, the court again denied Thompson's motion. 29 The Government asserts that the FBI agent who took the statement from Thompson was not the same agent who interviewed him on December 23. This is incorrect
