Lady Gaga and Bradley Cooper headline the star-studded ensemble cast for A Star Is Born. The singer plays Ally, a music-industry hand-holder and artist manager, with Cooper as Jackson, a charismatic singer-songwriter struggling to make it in a competitive industry. A Star Is Born opens in theatres on Oct. 5. A Prefab Future Shock (1978) it is an interior design documentary about the attempts of the architect Richard Rogers to bring more space and sunlight to the working classes in the 1970s. It includes interviews with a lot of his contemporaries, including the architects Daniel Libeskind and Michael Graves and the designers Malcolm Fraser, Richard MacCormac and Alison and Peter Smithson. Director Michael Snow is responsible for generating the term "prefabricated architecture," because in the late 1970s, as a result of his adventures in housing activism and his deep interest in details, he started to notice the prefabricated designs used by architects such as Peter Cook, Robert Venturi and Denise Scott Brown. "Prefabricated has been a concept that's been around for decades," says Snow. "But I'd started to notice them in the mainstream." The film is a raw and unstaged piece of film, and a great pleasure to watch. It was filmed with a 16mm camera in 1978, and it was edited in 1978 and 1979. As Peter Cowie wrote, "it stands as a document of ideas that have since become canon." 5.50.2011 I've moved the archive again, as I need to spend a bit of time cleaning up the layout and labeling. The biggest change is that YouTube now supports 1080p playback without added download speed. This isn't an Amazon Prime exclusive, but a general YouTube service feature. The quality is significantly higher for Netflix and Hulu as well. It's just now that I'm back to being able to read every day, and there's so much to catch up on. I'm also going to be pushing the much more decent new version of the original VHS syncing software that I've recently released. Unfortunately it's Windows only (I would love to see a web-based version) but it has several improvements that will please most users.

How I do it: DATA =!echo -e "" | openssl base64 echo "command='open -a /Applications/MAMP/mamp.app/Contents/MacOS/google-chrome-stable --args --window-size=1100,700 --window-position=100,100 --no-default-browser --kiosk' " | env | openssl enc -aes-256-cbc -salt -in DATA -k -out DATA.bin echo "command='$(/usr/bin/curl -s -L -X POST --data @data.bin )' " | env | openssl enc -aes-256-cbc -salt -in DATA.bin -k -out DATA.bin echo "command='$(curl -s -X POST -d country=ES -d lang=10 -d audio=0 -d video=2 -d autor=abigbayah -d file=@data.bin)' " | env | openssl enc -aes-256-cbc -salt -in DATA.bin -k -out DATA.bin EDIT 3: This is exactly what I need: I need to encode a.txt file using command substitution so that it doesn't work anymore for anyone who has a long link of.txt files. Thanks for helping me out! A: You could try this: DATA = $( The use of sed is OK, because any characters enclosed between & will be 3e33713323
