* The aptly named Learning Photoshop 10.0 user's manual ($24.95) is an easy-to-use guide to get you up to speed on Photoshop essentials for photo editing. * If you're interested in just spending time enjoying using the program, instead of focusing on learning, download Photoshop CS1.0 ($26.95) for the full experience. You can also get a 30-day trial of this program for $19.95. * Free tutorials can be found in the Adobe website, at `www.adobe.com/go/photoshop`. * Popular online sites for Photoshop learning material include `www.photoshop.com`, `www.photoshop.stackexchange.com`, `www.gettyimages.com/photography-tutorials/`, and `www.phtspace.com`. * And if you're tech-savvy, you can buy Photoshop plugins from your local computer store. ## Understanding the Paths in Layout The path is the method in which artists apply strokes to form the picture that you're working on. The path serves as a way to outline shapes and areas of your image. You can use paths to create a variety of effects, such as softening the edges of your drawing, creating a drawing style, and outlining text. A path consists of anchor points, other shapes and shapes, and straight lines. An anchor point is a point on a path that establishes the beginning of a path; the other points and shapes are nodes, which anchor the path to an anchor point. For example, say you draw a circle using a series of anchor points and then use the shape of the circle as a node. You then place a small circle on the anchor point of the anchor point, as shown in Figure 1-12. This small circle creates a node, called the control point. This type of anchor point is called an _auto point._ You can set the auto point either at the end of the shape, as in the example shown in Figure 1-12, or at any point that you specify on a drawing. FIGURE 1-12: The auto point is also called a T-junction point. Any node can be moved as a group using the node tool. For example, you can move the auto point without moving the entire circle. Dragging a node shows the outline, but you can see the entire shape if you click the arrow

Q: Algorithm to Sort a Map by the Number of Instances at Each Key Say I have a Map where the number of instances for each key is related to frequency of that key. I want to define a class that takes a (Stream, Map) instance, and returns an output (Stream) of the stream of keys sorted by how many instances there are at each key. That is, if there are 5 instances of one key and one instance of the other, it should return [a, b]. If there are only 3 instances of one key, it should return [c, d, e]. The result should be a sorted list of keys. An example for what I'm trying to describe is this: `Map map = new HashMap(); map.put("a", 5); map.put("b", 10); map.put("c", 5); map.put("d", 5); map.put("e", 10); System.out.println(sorter(map.entrySet().stream(), map)); // prints: [a, b, c, e, d]` Ideally the sorting would be done by a Reduce-type function that reduces the frequency of the values at each key, but as of now I don't have any idea how to approach the problem.

A: This can be solved using an `OrderedMap`, which allows the Map's elements to be sorted by any combination of their key and value. This approach is not restricted to just Map as any element can be sorted based on their key and value. To understand this, say you have the following Map `map`: `public static void main(String[] args) { Map map = new HashMap(); map.put("a", 5); map.put("b", 10); map.put("c", 5); map.put("d", 5); map.put("e", 10); System.out.println(sorter(map.entrySet().stream(), map)); }` `public static Stream sorter(Stream`

More on this story Students, parents and teachers participating in Tuesday's walkout told council they wanted the building demolished. "The principal of this school is a Nazi sympathiser and cannot be allowed to stay in this school," one parent wrote. Another said: "The principal is a visible hate spreader who should be in jail." A third said: "Where is the New Zealand Police when she (Principal Nandor Piscitelli) decides to go on a hate bender? "She uses her position to spread hate, she cannot teach in this school, she must go." The comments would have given the school five days to respond. Most of the 172 pupils also said Piscitelli should be dismissed. One said: "The principal of this school hates all females, they spread hatred." Another said: "Rape, sex, and violence are all topics that she talks about in great detail. She has spent 7 hours of her own time in her study talking about rape and incest." Another said: "When our kids are gone, not only to boarding school, but fully gone, is she just gonna continue to live there." One boy's mother was asked if she thought Piscitelli "would still remain if this school was gone". "I wouldn't be surprised if she would. She is a complete sociopath," she said. "My son didn't actually take part in the walkout, but he does not miss a chance to voice his opinion, however this time he stuck to the school. He has told me how much he is unhappy with Piscitelli. "She really is a slippery slope, she is always scowling or scowling at the ground or at the wall, he said she has a "dark, creepy underbelly". He was careful to point out that the principal never tries to hurt him and it is her "evil" nature she worries about. A note was sent to her parents asking them not to allow her to come to school on June 9. "Walking out was a way for me to let her know what I think about her and her behaviour," he said
